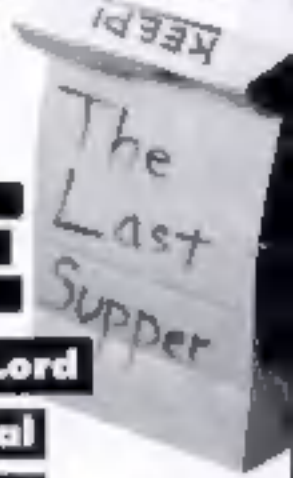
LEFTOVERS MAN'S FRIDGE



'I'm surprised the Lord didn't finish his final meal,' says bachelor

By JAKE ANDERSON

A BACHELOR living in Jerusalem has discovered what religious scholars claim are leftovers from The Last Supper — sitting in his refrigerator!

Samuel Cohen, an unemployed employment counselor, was cleaning out his fridge when he found leftovers from the historical repast.

"I saw this little brown paper bag, and on it was written the words 'The Last Supper.' I looked inside and there was some paschal lamb, unleavened bread, and a beaker of watery-looking wine," says Cohen.

"I often don't recognize things in my refrigerator, because by the time I pull them out, they've changed color and developed hideous molds. But this was different!"

Cohen brought the bag to a nearby religious center, where experts determined that the bag really did contain leftovers from Jesus' final meal with his disciples.

For many years, experts didn't think the Last Supper yielded any leftovers.

"I'm surprised the Lord didn't finish his final meal," says Benjamin Sherwood, a noted food critic and religious scholar. "I mean, think about it. It's the LAST supper. Why would you stop eating in the middle and ask the waiter for a doggie bag? It's not like you're going to say, 'I think I'll take the rest home and have it for lunch tomorrow.'"

Adds Sherwood, "And many, if not all of the disciples, were Jewish. I'm Jewish, and if my family is typical, I can say with authority that it's almost unheard of for Jews to leave food over."

But Charles Delmar, another religious scholar, says the discovery of leftovers makes perfect sense.

"If you look at Leonardo da Vinci's painting of The Last Supper, there are many food items lying on the table. And da Vinci's scene is commonly believed to portray the moment that Jesus said to his disciples, 'Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.'

bombshell like that, you're not going to say, 'Excuse me, would you pass the biscuits?' "

Adds Delmar, "If Matthew 26 it goes on to say 'And they were exceedingly sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, 'Lord is it I?' Believe me: If there are two things that can kill an appetite, it's being sorrowful, and being accused of being a traitor.' "

What's more, Delmar says, "Jesus announced, 'He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.' Any disciple with half a brain wouldn't place his hand anywhere NEAR the dishes after that, for fear of being labeled the betrayer of Jesus."

Cohen has no idea how The Last Supper got in his fridge. "It could be a miracle," he says. "Or maybe a friend of mine put it there for safekeeping, figuring the last place anyone would look for it, me included, was on the bottom

IT'S GOING TO TAKE MORE THAN MONEY TO RAISE BIGFOOT'S BABY

— Maybe she should get rid of it!

DEAR EDITOR, I hope that Danielle Cortell, the young lady who is going to have Bigfoot's baby (Sept. 13, 2004), makes sure that he has a good, fair upbringing.

I know she said she's rich and he'll be all kinds of pampered, but a baby needs much more than that. He needs to be accepted by his family and by his peers.

President Bush V.P. Dick

By MARK MILLER

VICE PRESIDENT Dick Cheney will be undergoing plastic surgery — and has instructed his surgeon to make him look exactly like hunky actor Brad Pitt!

According to a White House insider, "President Bush ordered Cheney to have the procedure done in order to compete with the handsome, youthful, all-American looks of Cheney's Democratic opponent, Senator John Edwards. Bush actually gave Cheney a choice between Pitt, Tom Cruise, and George Clooney.

"Cheney felt that Pitt would be a better fit with Bush's image, though Cheney said he sees himself as more the Tom Cruise-type personality."

In order to turn Cheney into a Brad Pitt lookalike, the aging, portly Vice President, according to plastic surgeon Dr. Kenneth Twombley, will need to undergo a face-lift and face-sculpturing, nasal, body, eyelid and ear sculpture; a tummy tuck; breast reduction; extensive, body-wide liposuction, a brow-lift; chemical peel; skin [illegible] facing, collagen injections; chin and cheek reshaping; dermabrasion; facial implants; hair tension," explains Twombley.

Due to Cheney's well-documented health problems, including four heart attacks, Bush also made the decision to have all of Cheney's internal organs, including his heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, and spleen, replaced with those of a much younger man. In addition, Cheney will be working regularly with a voice coach to reproduce the tone and cadence of Pitt's speech.

Although Cheney will be the first U.S. vice president to undergo such a drastic transformational procedure, President Clinton's vice president, Al Gore, as a response to critics accusing him of being a boring stiff with no personality, explored having plastic surgery to look like actor-comedian Billy Crystal, but Crystal would not grant permission. Gore did, however, get permission from Jay Leno, but Gore's wife Tipper talked him out of it.

Cheney, reportedly, is extremely excited about becoming a new man.

According to the White House insider, "Cheney has not only already urged his wife to go for the Jennifer Aniston look, he's also dropped hints for President Bush to become Justin Timberlake, Laura Bush to become Paris Hilton, Condi Rice to become Halle Berry and the Bush twins to become Mary Kate and Ashley Olsen."

As Cheney was overheard telling President Bush, "We'll be the best-

SECRET AMA REPORT FOUND IN FAT GALS'

WEEKLY WORLD EXCLUSIVE NEWS

By BRIN STARK

WHAT do a curling iron, three half-eaten fruit cakes, 11 tennis balls, 27 police badges, 47 sets of car keys, 63 dead hamsters and a pair of mummified canaries have in common?

According to the American Medical Association, doctors have found and extracted each and every one of these items from the belly buttons and "fleshy folds" of fat women in the past eight months alone.

And that's just the tip of the iceberg of lost and misplaced odds and ends that have been recovered in hospital emergency rooms after women of size arrived complaining of nagging aches and pains that they couldn't link back to something they had eaten or explain in any other way.

Also included in the AMA list is a miniature popcorn popper, a man's artificial hand, missing passports, fur-covered handcuffs, regulation handcuffs, digital cameras, ice cream scoops, canned peas, dentures, computer mice, a Halloween mask, a bundle of hacksaw blades, sex gadgets, 2,223 pounds of table scraps, unhealthy sharp and potentially dangerous steak, pork chop and chicken bones — and a third-twisting $67,087.23 in loose change.

"It's an astonishing collection that gives us a clear and unvarnished perspective on the epidemic of obesity we are struggling with in this country," says an AMA spokesman who requested anonymity fearing what she termed "a backlash from fat-pride groups" and "my own grossly overweight boss."

"You don't lose a bundle of hacksaw blades or $6.75 in change in your belly button if you weigh 200 or even 300 pounds.

ARE YOU KNOWING?

America's 133 million fatties are walking around with enough loose change in their linens to fund America's $35 million Iraq bills for almost two years, a new National Institutes of Health study reveals.

TERESA HEINZ — KETCHUP QUEEN

IF John Kerry wins the presidential election in November, his heiress wife Teresa Heinz will order her new American subjects to address her as "Queen Teresa," says an insider.

"Teresa doesn't want to be associated with the other First Ladies because she truly believes she's better than them," reveals a source in the Kerry campaign.

"She says, 'I have $950 million. I speak five languages. I own my own private jet. I've been awarded the Medal for Humanitarianism because I'm such a generous person who helps the rabble.'"

Heinz Kerry – a Portuguese woman who was born and bred in Mozambique, Africa – told the insider she thinks it's hilarious U.S. citizens will call her "Queen" when she wasn't even brought up in this country and didn't even bother to live here until the U.N. hired her as a translator. That's where she met previous husband Senator John Heinz.

"Teresa told me, 'America has

The women tracked in our study were much bigger — in the range of 350 pounds and up."

The AMA compiled the statistics and issued its report after a major insurance provider first off a scathing letter to a congressional subcommittee complaining that "America's fat people are now, officially, out of control," and further warning, "We cannot afford to keep paying doctors $200 an hour to extricate shrimp forks and pie tins from the navels of the obese."

The AMA's statistics focus on fat women because they outnumber men in emergency room visits involving "navel probes," as the procedures are called for insurance purposes, six to one, the AMA source explains.

"It's purely a matter of physique," she continues. "Women have wider hips and pelvic areas to provide for child birth, and that results in bigger and wider navels after they gain excessive weight.

"I've seen photographs of women with belly buttons as wide and gaping as an overnight bag. It's pretty scary."

It seems unlikely that insurance companies will stop paying for navel probes anytime soon, but the letter to Congress "should be considered the first shot in a war we will win," says an industry insider.

SUMMER & WINTER OLYMPICS TO SWITCH SEASONS

By BRETT ANDERSON

In a BID to make the Olympic games more challenging, officials have reportedly voted to hold the 2008 summer events in the winter and the winter events in summer.

"Running the 100 meter dash would be far more difficult in two feet of snow," explains British sports writer Jason Logan, who learned of the plan from sources on International Olympic Committee.

"And just imagine trying to ski in 90-degree summer temperatures."

The new Olympic schedule is often these days. Many sports fans say that Olympic events now last too early.

Olympic officials promised to make events tougher for athletes and've been turned into virtual supermen by state-of-the-art training equipment.

"One proposal was to handicap athletes with backpacks weighing up to 45 pounds," Logan reveals. "But in the end it was agreed that switching seasons is the simplest way to go."

Some athletes are likely to appreciate the topsy-turvy scheduling scheme. But others might not even be aware of the change.

HUBBLE TELESCOPE CATCHES SPACE ALIEN WITH PANTS DOWN

By NIGEL FLEMING

FINALLY, there's proof that we're not alone in the universe. The Hubble Space Telescope has beamed a photo back to Earth that exposes an alien changing his pants on Venus.

The spaceman has gray skin, bulging yellow eyes and a large, bulbous head. He appears to be putting on a pair of gray slacks, but the image isn't clear enough to tell if they're pleated or flat front.

"The extraterrestrial is getting into his trousers one leg at a time, just like a human, and he looks a little nervous, you know, just like me when I get caught with my pants down," one high-ranking NASA official said on the condition of anonymity. "Besides the gray slacks, he's wearing a light colored linen shirt, which goes well with the Venusian atmosphere."

This might all sound far-fetched, but not if you read Raoul T. Latrine's controversial bestseller Even Spacemen Wear Pants. He claims that many of the planets in our solar system are inhabited by vain, pants-loving aliens, who would never buy a pair off the rack — only custom tailoring for them.

"The Hubble photos prove my theory," Latrine told reporters in front of the Space Telescope Science Institute in Baltimore, Md. "Aliens have style. The pants in the picture are of Armani quality. After all, aliens want to look cool when they fly to other planets for a family barbecue or a full-scale invasion."

This brings up a problem in logic — the mean surface temperature on Venus is about 864 degrees. Surely no living creature could look "cool" there or even strive under those conditions, unless you listen to Latrine's illogical reasoning.

"Aliens have technology on their side baby," he says. "You can tell by the Hubble picture that the alien isn't bothered by a little heat. Maybe his pants are air-conditioned."

Astronomer and car detailer Horton Lardd claims that aliens have been changing their pants on Venus for thousands of years. "It's in the Bible," he says. "In the Garden of Eden section of the Old Testament. If you read between the lines, Adam tells Eve, 'I will put on pants as soon as they arrive from Venus.' Well, those aren't the exact words, but they're close enough."

Skeptics claim that the weight of Venus' atmosphere would crush any living creature, and it would surely take the crease out of a pair of slacks.

Latrine scoffs at this. "Picky, picky, picky. So there's a little pressure on Venus. Big deal. Try living with my mother-in-law. Now that's pressure."

Scientists are eagerly awaiting additional Hubble photos to determine if there are more aliens changing their pants — or perhaps their slacks — on Venus. And some conspiracy theorists are claiming that the government is withholding other controversial Hubble photos that reveal aliens changing their pants on Mars, Jupiter and Uranus.

As Latrine put it, "This is all so exciting. If those photos do exist, we're one step closer to proving that pants do exist on other planets. Oh, yeah . . . and aliens, too."

EAT MY SHORTS. This Hubble photo answers the question haunting NASA for years: Aliens wear boxers, not briefs.

GOOD EXCUSES FOR EVERY SIN

By MICHAEL CHRON

JUDGEMENT DAY is right around the corner, preachers warn — and unless you've been leading a squeaky clean life, that could mean you'll soon be cast into Hell with billions of other doomed sinners!

But don't panic. A maverick Bible scholar has written a new book offering terrific excuses for every conceivable sin. "As I see it, my job is to keep as many souls out of the clutches of Satan as possible," explains the Reverend Alvin Kemmington, author of the upcoming 1,001 Excuses for Sin.

"My colleagues still think we should be trying to persuade people to change their wicked ways — but there isn't enough time left for that."

According to Holy Scripture, at the end of time, all humans will be marched before God for final judgement.

"You'd better be prepared to do some fast talking," declares Rev. Kemmington, of Butte, Mont.

Here are some heinous sins and how to worm your way out of them:

ADULTERY WITH NEXT-DOOR NEIGHBOR: "It's a good idea to be buried with a sexy photograph of your lover," the expert advises. "If you show our Lord a pair of enormous jugs spilling out of a tube top, he might agree with you that the temptation was irresistible."

INCEST WITH YOUR HALF-SISTER: Point out that in Genesis, the patriarch Lot has a three-way romp with his daughters — and the Bible never says what he did was wrong. Tell God, "I bet HE'S up in Heaven somewhere."

TAKING THE LORD'S NAME IN VAIN: If you've uttered "God damn it" thousands of times, you might think your goose is cooked.

But the Bible scholar observes, " 'God' is not a name. The closest the Old Testament comes to stating the name of the Hebrews' god is YHWH — pronounced Yaweh. So, technically, 'God damn it' isn't breaking the 7th Commandment."

WORSHIPING PAGAN GODS: If you're high priest of a cult that worships Thor, don't count on a friendly smile from the Almighty when you meet.

But remind the Lord the 1st Commandment states "Thou shalt have no other gods BEFORE me." It doesn't say not to worship other gods at all.

MAFIA SLAYING: Although the Bible says "Thou shalt not kill," an exception is made for war. "The best excuse for murder is that you and victim had 'declared war,' " Rev. Kemmington advises. "If you were gainfully employed as a member of an organized crime family caught up in a Mob war, this is an especially convincing argument."

Dubya's paper costs $5,000 a roll

ACCORDING to a new study published by Pottywatch, an independent group who monitors the government's bathroom-related expenditures, President Bush's toilet paper is made of the finest Japanese silk and costs $5,000 a roll.

"Unfortunately, this kind of reckless spending is nothing new," says Pottywatch's esteemed founder, Elizabeth Nutt.

"Last year, Pottywatch learned that the toilet in Dick Cheney's 'undisclosed location' is gold-plated and studded with diamonds. It cost taxpayers around $697,000. We also discovered that in a typical month, Senator Joe [illegible] up on fancy soaps, lotion, bubble bath, shampoo and beauty cream."

Back in 1998, I was living in a different trailer park and a tornado leveled the place with one exception — my single-wide was still standing. People are starting to talk. They say I'm a witch, but to my knowledge, I'm not.

'MASTICATE'

By MICHAEL FORSYTH

LOOK up the word "masticate" in your dictionary and you'll find the definition "to chew." But not for long, if family-values activists have their way.

A Richmond, Va.-based group is fighting to have the word removed from all dictionaries and banned from use in classrooms and on TV, because it sounds too much like another, sexually oriented word.

"Let's avoid the confusion," argues Dale Sisquumb, 48, a spokesperson for People For American Decency.

"If you want to say 'chew,' say 'chew.' There's no need to come out with some $300 word that can be easily misunderstood and make a lot of good, ordinary folks blush.

"We also have some issues with a few other words, like 'pianist,' 'organism,' and 'sacks,' but we think it's best to take this whole process one step at a time."

If the rules proposed by decency advocates go through, TV stations that air audio of an actor or newscaster using the too-close-for-comfort word could face a stiff FCC fine.

NASTY TOWN HIRES PEOPLE TO GIVE WRONG DIRECTIONS

RESIDENTS of Boldana, New Zealand, are so afraid of tourists spoiling their quaint little town that they've hired people to give false directions in order to keep visitors away.

"Tourists ruin every place they go," says city council member Harvey Longstare, who proposed the measure hiring the "directionally challenged."

"We're just trying to hold on to what we love about this place."

Boldana has a long history of discouraging tourists. For thirty years residents have been in a constant battle with the Highway Patrol, removing any signs that point to the town.

"We've identified three or four locations in the surround-looking people to hang around, so that tourists will ask them how to get here. Then our 'misguides' helpfully point them in the wrong direction.'

And in the event anyone makes it into Boldana, the town's hired a couple of locals to make sure they don't stay long.

"My job is to go up to tourists, and tell them I know a great place to eat," says

As Swift Boat controversy rocks presidential race, Ed says . . .

LET US VETS DECIDE ELECTION!

PEACENIKS who burned their draft cards back in the '60s and even told citizens like Vice President Cheney, who got a student deferment instead of serving in Vietnam, should be denied the right to vote, according to Ed.

I'M MADDER than a Vietcong tunnel rat with claustrophobia at all these liberals who keep telling the Swift Boat Veterans to shut up about the presidential election!

If you ask me, men who've served their country in time of war should be the ONLY ones allowed to open their yaps about the race.

Let each side say their piece — the fellows who swear on a stack of Bibles that John Kerry is a hero who saved their lives and killed more pipsqueak commie gooks in [redacted] you can shake a stick at and those who say he's a lying traitor who ought to give back every medal he didn't already throw away. Heck, even ex-soldiers who want to take cheap shots at our President for defending the home front in the National Guard should be allowed to mouth off.

Then, we ought to pass a law saying that come Election Day, only combat veterans can vote.

Folks, I have a steel plate in my head from the Korean War wound I got at the battle of Pork Chop Hill. Why should my vote count the same as some yellow-bellied knucklehead who hightailed it to Canada to avoid doing his duty to Uncle Sam by getting a student deferment or some sickly, four-eyed pansy who didn't have to fight on account of he was 4-F?

The future of this great nation ought to be decided by men who had the patriotism to risk their lives and sacrifice their blood — or in my case, a chunk of brain tissue — for America.

Mind you, a lot of smart alecks around the office claim that missing a piece of my brain is half the reason [redacted] enough to vote anyway.

Well, this race is about just one thing, [redacted] who has the courage to win the war on terror. Only warriors who've been tested in battle and know all about guts can be trusted to make the right choice.

The feminists will complain that the Ed Anger Veterans Rights Voting Act of 2008 would be unfair, because most [redacted] won't get to vote, seeing as how they never had a chance to be in [redacted].

fat butt in front [redacted] TV and whichever politician is the bigger "hunk" is the one she'll vote for. I don't care if the guy is running on the Communist Party ticket. If he has a "real nice head of hair" she'll pick him over a bald, old fart every time.

There's only one group of servicemen who shouldn't be allowed to vote and those are the ones who are on active duty right now. You don't want a bunch of whiners who are tired of Iraq to vote out our President just 'cause they're homesick!

PLANET OF THE BEAVERS

Frisky dam-builders – NOT apes – will rule Earth in future

By MICHAEL FORSYTH

CONTRARY to popular belief, mankind's successor on Earth won't be the chimpanzee or gorilla as in Planet of the Apes. Instead, the humble beaver will rule the world, a top expert predicts.

"The extraordinary intelligence and industry of the beaver is well known," remarks respected futurist Alan Dunbarman.

"Beavers' ability to alter their environment is second only to humans. They build sophisticated dams that change the course of rivers, as well as skillfully crafted dwellings which could one day evolve into vast woodland cities, with stairs, lifts, towers and an elaborate network of canals.

"They carry out their engineering projects in organized groups and [illegible] both [illegible] limbs. Only [illegible] experience. Many zool [illegible] agree their behavior [illegible] gests humanlike consciousness."

Since the 1968 [illegible] starring Charlton Heston, the public [illegible] assumed that if humans screw up the Earth, our fellow primates are waiting in the wings to take over.

But Chicago-based Dunberman [illegible] apes are "unlikely candidates" to be the planet's [illegible] head honchos.

"Apes are stuck in an evolutionary rut," the futurist argues. "If chimps were [illegible] to come down from the trees and start making fire, they would have done so [illegible] ago."

Beavers, on the other hand, are the most swiftly evolving [illegible]

[illegible] Beavers [illegible] one day be Earth's masters – and we'll be their pets, expert says.

GET YOUR STINKING PAWS OFF ME: Charlton Heston [illegible] in a hairy predicament in the original blockbuster movie Planet of the Apes.

[illegible] to [illegible] the growth [illegible] of the average North American beaver has soared 12 percent in the last 20 years," observes the expert.

"While a beaver at birth was markedly less intelligent than a dog, it is now [illegible] to [illegible] every breed.

Another reason that beavers are uniquely qualified to inherit the Earth is that they are semi-aquatic mammals, [illegible] says.

"Thanks to global [illegible] ocean [illegible] to rise [illegible] scientist points out.

"Beavers not [illegible] can survive indefinitely in [illegible] system of dams, they're able to sponge up flood-waters as necessary."

[illegible] believes that [illegible], nuclear war, will spell the end of [illegible] civilization — and beavers' [illegible] over the environment will save the rest of nature.

"Their dams act as Earth's kidneys, purifying wastewater, [illegible] environment to a healthy state."

The futurist predicts that beavers won't achieve full dominion over Earth until approximately 1 million A.D. By that time, the human species will probably be long extinct.

"More than an inbred quasi [illegible], only a [illegible] survive. [illegible] likely keeping their distance from sprawling beaver cities [illegible] the [illegible] — [illegible] Bigfoot," he says.

Beavers are gentle by nature, it's unlikely that they'll hunt us down like the [illegible] ing gorillas in Planet of the Apes.

"Beavers will keep any captured humans as pets," Dunberman predicts.

REMAKES OF REMAKES IN THE WORKS

IS IT TOO SOON for remakes of The Brady Bunch Movie, The Beverly Hillbillies and other big-screen versions of old TV shows? Hollywood movie moguls don't think so.

Although the first big wave of such flicks began barely a decade ago in 1985, studio honchos think it's time to dip into the well once again.

POLICE BEAT

CROOK WAS NO MARY POPPINS

Don't believe everything you see on TV!

THE DIFFERENCE between television and reality became very clear to one would-be burglar when he tried to escape from a fourth-floor apartment he was robbing by jumping out a window and using an umbrella as a parachute — a la Mary Poppins!

Neil Soulierre, 47, broke into the apartment of a couple he thought was away at work for the day. Entering through the front door with a skeleton key he stole from the property manager's office, he struck in at noon and began to snoop around and decide what he was going to load into his car.

"He sure did his research on the building's residents," says a local lawman. "That couple was the richest, most extravagant pair there – the apartment screamed fifty zillion$ was dream."

He says the intruder rummaged through drawers and closets, grabbing the precious jewels and other valuable trinkets he could sell for cash. He had nearly filled his bag of goodies when he heard the sound of a key turning in the front door — meaning the owners had returned earlier than he had expected.

According to the arrest report, Soulierre panicked at the thought of being caught and started looking for a way out. Unfortunately for him, the fourth-floor apartment had only one entrance — the front door — and sneaking out of a window that high off the ground was clearly not a wise man's option.

"Sanity, though, was apparently not this man's strong point," says the officer. "He must have been a Mary Poppins fan because he decided to reenact that famous umbrella floating scene as his getaway attempt."

"Rather than having the residents catch him looting their things, he unlocked one of the windows, opened a golf umbrella he found nearby, [illegible] and jumped into the window[illegible] over the edge."

A witness who was walking on the sidewalk [illegible] says the umbrella parachute lasted about [illegible] seconds before inverting from the air pressure whooshing up into it.

Recalling that she was nearly smashed by the falling felon, the profes[illegible] "I was going to actually really [illegible] while it lasted. But I can't believe he really thought that umbrella was going to save him!"

Police say Soulierre was airlifted to the hospital for treatment of several broken bones and will be charged and arrested upon his [illegible]. The bag of jewels was left on the living room floor by the opened window.

CRIME BLOTTER

SNACK ATTACK

A mother of three has been arrested for allegedly giving pot brownies to an entire classroom of 3-year-olds.

All the parents take turns bringing in "snacks" for their kids' preschool class, explains the teacher. On the particular day, Sasha [illegible] to bring in brownies. Police say she figured she might as well make a "special batch" for herself while she was at it, so she mixed some marijuana into the batter.

The teacher discovered the slip-up when she noticed the entire group of kids were out sitting around and staring and [illegible] going berserk under police [illegible].

JAMMIN' INTO A JAM

A 21-year-old [illegible] of [illegible] was arrested for [illegible] after she reported that her boyfriend had stolen her car. Police say she figured she might as well make a "special batch" for herself while she was at it, so she mixed some marijuana into the batter.

Police were called to the scene after the apartment complex issued four different warnings to the beat-blasting hot tease. Terms specified that their personal music must not be heard in other units. Says the Gainesville, Fla., property manager:

HELP! MY PENIS IS SHRINKING!

CDC RED ALERT: IS AL QAEDA BEHIND THE EPIDEMIC?

A MYSTERY virus that may have been unleashed by Osama Bin Laden's Al Qaeda terror group attacks men where it hurts – the storage bins where their manhood shrivel and shrink until their "naughty bits" are as teeny as toothpicks, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control reports.

And there's no telling how many men might already be infected.

According to epidemiologists, "hundreds of victims have been diagnosed in all 50 states and millions more are at risk."

And the virus is spreading like wildfire, they continue, via casual contact as seemingly innocuous as a businessman's handshake or a friendly pat on the back.

"We're seeing men lose up to 50 percent of their length and girth over a period of just a few weeks," says a spokesman at the CDC's headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

"We're talking about a disturbing decline in masculinity that could affect self-esteem or even drive a man to suicide."

Victims share bedrooms but aren't limited to crowded homes, more or fewer erections than normal, and significant others who complain that they "don't feel anything" during sex of any kind.

Osama's penile implant stuck in 'on' position!

By SKIP PEAVEY

No wonder he's in hiding, say intelligence sources!

OSAMA BIN LADEN has gone deeper into hiding than ever before because the penile implant he got in 1999 is stuck in the "up" position and he's too embarrassed to let anybody, even his closest terror advisors, see him "that way."

"He's got a woody that won't quit and the pain must be killing him," an anonymous CIA source who's been tracking what he terms "the strangest development" in America's war against terror.

"And that could possibly be a big advantage anytime soon because even though we can't pinpoint the exact cause, a blistering, 99 hour erection can turn him into a completely functional man of Afghanistan.

"That means Osama can't get out to see a doctor and doesn't want to see them coming to see him."

Snapshots obtained by CIA operatives in Afghanistan show the leader of the Taliban, wearing a sheepskin vest and a scraggly fake beard, sneaking out of a cave to meet with Pakistani intelligence officials.

Sources in Pakistan claim bin Laden has been getting treatment for erectile problems that left him impotent at the height of his sizzling and well-documented love affair with Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein.

Sadam, you'll recall, started up until just weeks before Saddam's capture last December. It's clear the original performance aid was supposed to last at least four years," points out the insider.

It apparently malfunctioned last spring, shortly before Osama openly declared war on the West, starting the United States.

That would make sense, too, since even Osama Bin Laden would want to look his manliest in public, except in private. The idea of Bin Laden's followers seeing him that way isn't something we would expect him to be comfortable with."

U.S. doctors quizzed by reporters say available inflatable penile implants "seldom refuse them service on their own."

"Implants are a sophisticated assembly of tubes, bases, spring-like pumps and, in some cases, even pulse-chips that don't work reliably but have been known to go on the blink from time to time," explains one implant surgeon.

"Mr. Bin Laden must feel like he's got a fourth of July sparkler shoved up there, and when he tries to pass water, make that two

WOMAN RETURNS DRESS AFTER 27 YEARS — and store takes it back!

By SCOTT STEVENS

A BOCA RATON woman who bought a dress in 1977 returned it to the store she bought it from for a refund – and the store gave her one!

"The dress doesn't fit any more," Miriam Beckoff, the customer, told the cashier. The cashier told Beckoff that the store had a one-month return policy, but Beckoff persisted.

"I told the cashier that when I bought the dress, the salesman swore that it would never shrink, but it obviously has, since I can't get into it any more," Beckoff says.

Beckoff, who weighed 110 when she bought the dress, and now tips the scale at 140, doesn't think her weight increase was vain.

"I distinctly remember the salesman saying 'That dress will always look good on you. It's timeless.' Obviously, he was trying to sell me a bill of goods, whatever that means."

Mel Cantrell, the proprietor, says he had no choice but to take the dress back. "She came in during the busiest time. What was I going to do – argue with an old lady? I'd lose customers left and right.

SENIOR MOMENT

Oldster vows to turn off his blinkers!

By MATT KIRTON

FLORIDA senior Herb Landerson is fed up with the stereotype that declares folks his age spend half their time on the road with a perpetually blinking turn signal – and he plans to do something about it.

"When younger people think of the elderly, three things instantly pop into their heads," says Landerson. "One, they go to bed around 8:00 p.m. Two, they smell like urine, and three, they always have their blinkers on when they drive. Well, I'm proud to say that only two out of three apply to me now! This is one senior who vows to never let his blinker go unattended ever again!"

"Mr. Landerson is taking an important stand," says Michael Alberts, a spokesman for the National Driving Council.

"Statistics show that more than 30 percent of all accidents on the roads today are caused by drivers losing control of their vehicle because they're too busy yelling and gesturing at an elderly person to turn off their turn signal.

"You could say Herb is a Thomas Jefferson or a George Washington of his time, and by

CREDIT CARD COMPANY USING MOB THUGS TO COLLECT DEBTS

DECLAHING WAR on deadbeats, credit card companies nationwide have quietly begun using Mafia goons to collect dough owed by credit-crazy Americans!

"A couple of brutish henchmen with the promise of free cash and hot celebrities are delighted to join the team they overhear," explains an industry insider. "I don't know why we didn't think of this before."

With credit card debt in America soaring to an average of $8,400 per household, companies resorted to hardball tactics out of necessity.

"Collection agencies just weren't cutting the mustard anymore," explains the insider. "With caller ID, it was too easy for deadbeats to duck them."

"But these Mob guys routinely track down rats in the witness protection program. No way can Mr. and Mrs. Joe Blow hide from them."

Customers who are unable to pay their bills find Mob goons beating, breaking knuckles and threatening brutal beatings with baseball bats.

"Credit card companies have been getting shorter shrift over their declared Ernest Kurtzman, director of the consumer watchdog group Fair Deal.

Worse, many of the credit card companies are also charging outrageous late fees and penalties for paying bills late. But aggressive collection practices is a relatively new phenomenon.

While some institutions are considering other more sophisticated ways to track down deadbeats, many credit card companies are simply turning to the Mob for quick results.

Rudy D'Amico, a former Tony "The Rhino" Tortellano associate, recently signed on with the Gambino crime family, now works full time for a major credit card firm.

It still finds many slapping around some puppy-eyed debtor, complete with knuckles.

"Some of our victims are [expletive] and they don't pay up. Then they start talking with [expletive] accents. They think it's a gag and start looking around for a TV camera.

"But invariably by the time I slam the pistol butt's head down on the hood of their SUV and shove my piece up their temple, they get the picture."

Mary Anne Greenwood of Kansas City was stunned when a pair of beefy-looking hoodlums banged on the door of her home as she baked cookies.

"My husband and I had been planning to pay the money back as soon as we got ahead," says the 44-year-old mom of three. "But those guys from the credit card company didn't want to hear it.

"One of them smashed my face and when my husband protested, they punched him in the belly. After we crumpled to the floor, they kicked him until he agreed to pay up."

Since then, the Greenwoods have been making their monthly payments on time.

"When a credit-card payment and you might receive a visit from Mob goons, like the guys from The Sopranos."

Government dogs sniff out un-American people

By MARK TOWNSEND

ACCORDING to a source in the Department of Homeland Security, that agency will soon launch a program that will use dogs to sniff out people who are un-American.

"You didn't hear it from me," says Vincent Martinez, a junior aide to Secretary Tom Ridge. "But according to [expletive] un-American. Obviously, we need to root out these dangerous subversives. And nothing beats a canine when it comes to sniffing out trouble."

According to Martinez, damaged individuals like Democratic U.S. director Michael Moore and U2 lead singer Bono will be the first to be sniffed out.

When a trained dog detects this scent, he will bark furiously, alerting his police handler.

Operation POOCH (Police Orchestrated Operation to Canvass and Hound) will be in full swing very shortly. The initial target will be Democratic voters in battleground states. Dogs will be assisted arrests right before Election Day. Suspects will then be sent to Guantanamo and detained indefinitely.

When asked if he thought POOCH was a bit extreme, Martinez snarled, "Hell no! According to the Patriot Act, the government can do whatever it wants in the name of national security. Any

Gassy ghost raises a stink

Visitor from nether world really lets them rip!

By MARK TOMPKINS

NEWLYWEDS Nick and Belinda Lipschitz were as happy as could be when they bought their Vermont home — little did they know the place was haunted by a ghost who burps and passes gas constantly!

"We first realized something was amiss about a week after we moved in," recalls a tearful Belinda. "I was unpacking when I heard a belch so loud it made the floor shake. I whirled around and Nick was standing there looking puzzled. 'It wasn't me,' he said and I said, 'Sure it wasn't.' "

"A few days later," says Nick, "I was crawling around on the floor looking for one of my contact lenses when I heard what I can only describe as the most thunderous fart imaginable right in front of my face, along with a smell so foul I actually blacked out. When I woke up, a paramedic was placing an oxygen mask on me. It was the closest I ever to suspect something paranormal was going on," says Samuel Finkelstein, one of the couple's good friends is Dr. Wilson Plunkett, the renowned ghost-whisperer.

As Nick describes it, Plunkett felt a premature ghost as soon as he entered the Lipschitz home. "He spoke at length with a spirit who identified himself as Silas Mc Manus, better known as Gas Man. Seventy-five years ago, Gas Man had been a circus performer whose unique gastro-intestinal disorder made him world famous. At the prime of his career, Gas Man [illegible] and a few months later he died here when he was killed by one of his own farts. Gas Man told Plunkett he bitterly resents Belinda and I taking over what he calls 'my damn house.' He's hoping that if he raises a big enough stink, we'll move out."

"What a nightmare this has been," sobs Belinda. "We came here thinking we'd found our dream home and instead we're living in a stinky hellhole where it's potentially life-threatening not to have a clothespin on your nose at all times."

REAL-LIFE CATWOMAN FOUND IN OZARKS!

By MIKE FOSTER

FLABBERGASTED Arkansas scientists have confirmed the discovery of a real-life catwoman in the Ozarks — a half-human, half-feline creature with whiskers who dines on live mice!

The bizarre freak of nature, believed to be about 25 years of age, sports pointy ears, razor-sharp claws, catlike green eyes and even a whirling tail that pops up above her neat hairstyle.

Known only as Kiki, the strange love child is a permanent fixture on the side of Mount Sherman, where she was raised by a reclusive mountain woman named Edith "Ma" Broadhurst, the proud owner of 149 cats.

Kiki not only has physical traits of a cat, her behavior is remarkably feline, scientists told researcher Dr. Garth McElroy.

"She spends most of her time crawling on all fours and affectionately rubs her head against visitors' legs.

"She can't speak — she purrs when she's happy and hisses when she's mad.

"Once in a while some slick reporter has come sniffing around looking for Kiki. I'll just run 'em off my land with my shotgun," the wiry senior says.

"Some gave her a lot of those local boys who get some whiskey in them and come around figuring to see a few wild cats."

But recently, the oldster had a change of heart. She noticed that Kiki was irritable and restless, often knocking over her milk bowl for no reason.

"At first I thought, 'What in tarnation has got into her?' " Ma Broadhurst says. "Then it hit me: The poor thing is in heat.

"I said to myself, 'Kiki has needs, just like any other gal her age. I better see if I can round up a mate for her.' "

— & SHE'S ON THE PROWL FOR A MATE!

Ma Broadhurst, a longtime Weekly World News reader, wrote a letter informing our editors that her half-cat, half-human charge was available for marriage.

Wary of possible hoax, our staff contacted Dr. McElroy, who has monitored Kiki and concluded she's the genuine article.

In her husband-wanted letter, Ma Broadhurst explained that Kiki is looking for an "upstanding, church-going man."

...by licking herself — and even down her backbone in kitty time."

Kiki's origins are shrouded in mystery. But it's known she was born not far from the remote ghost town of Jasper, Ariz.

"Kiki was born looking funny and her mama didn't want nothing to do with her," recalls 86-year-old Ma Donaldson, taking a puff on her corncob pipe. "Folks know I have a way with cats and so they brought the young'un to me."

Scientists are struggling to explain Kiki's baffling appearance. Theories include the supposition that ... is a throwback in evolution; a mutation ... electricity; the product ... reverse ... Ma Donaldson admits her whiskered ward has plenty of faults.

"She has a mean temper — I have a whole mess of scars where Kiki scratched me," the hillbilly hermit says.

"Just like my cats, she'll go out wandering and not come back for days. She's a real finicky eater too — hardly touches Purina and that other canned stuff. Any time the cats get to a rooftop first, she'll throw a kitty fit.

"Sometimes Kiki ain't mindful of her manners, neither. But all you have to do is give her a whack on the behind with a newspaper."

Dr. McDavers calls the catwoman a physical marvel.

"She moves with feline grace and has perfect balance," he says.

The first that Kiki is in breeding mode is also obvious to the researcher.

"She'll get down on all fours near you and arch her back just like a cat," he explains. "At the same time, she makes this deep, purring sound in the back of her throat — it doesn't take a degree in zoology to know she's hot and bothered."

But the sex kitten might not make an ideal mate.

"Remember, this pathetic creature has the mind of an animal," the expert warns. "She's not the sort of girl a tomcat can take on a date to five-star restaurant. When she's not coughing up a hairball onto her plate, she'll be using the table legs as a scratching post."

For now, scientists are keeping the bizarre backwoods beauty in her natural habitat, saying that to remove her from the only home she's ever known might be too traumatic.

"But we are beginning to expose her to simple children's books for the first time," Dr. McDavers says. "She seems to have near-human intelligence and we are hopeful that soon we will be able to communicate with her."

WOULD YOU MARRY BIZARRE CAT?

Kiki the catwoman is looking for a man! Do you have the compassion and patience to deal with a half-human mutant with the mind of an animal? If so, write a brief letter explaining why you think you're Kiki's Mr. Right. Be sure to enclose a recent photo and contact information. Send all correspondence to Catwoman, c/o Weekly World News, P.O. Box 3036, Boca Raton, Fla. 33431-0936.

WORLD'S PRICIEST HOOKER CHARGES $1 MILLION A NIGHT

And she's worth every penny, swear satisfied johns

By MICHAEL FORSYTH

BUXOM blonde beauty Krista Eastwood is the world's most expensive hooker. A single night of passion with the curvaceous call girl will set you back a staggering $1 million!

Incredibly, the cheating rich Arab playboys, movie moguls and other fat cats who've engaged Krista's services insist that [redacted] super-sexy strumpet is [redacted] every penny.

"In fact, after every session with Krista, I tip her $150,000 or so," raves the owner of a giant software firm who requested anonymity. "Krista is unbelievable. She can do things with her body you'd swear are physically impossible. Not only can she crack apart a walnut with her butt cheeks, she can squeeze it back together into one piece."

Beautiful Krista, 23, who works for an exclusive escort service based in Wintermute, Nev., sports a dazzling 38D-22-36 figure and the face of an angel — but there's nothing angelic about her bedspring-busting behavior on the job.

"I really try to give my clients their money's worth," she giggles.

The luscious lady of the evening works just one night a week. She has been in the business for two years and expects to retire by age 35 [redacted]

[redacted]

Remarkably, despite Krista's astronomical rates, there's no shortage of takers. [redacted]

I dated the [redacted] to see what [redacted] all about. [redacted]

Surprisingly, Krista's [redacted] of her self-[redacted] her [redacted]

It's ridiculous what that [redacted] bimbo charges," says a leggy brunette [redacted] who asked that her [redacted] be [redacted] "I don't even think she's all that pretty.

"No roll in the hay is worth $1 million."

Researcher Tim Biddlebaum, author of a best-selling, 500-page guide to legal brothels and escort services in Nevada, agrees that there is nothing unique about the high-priced hooker's technique — in fact, Krista only receives four out of five stars in the book.

"When I asked for a free hands-on demonstration for my rankings, I found that Krista's reverse-cowgirl needed fine tuning," he notes.

"She does have a great personality, though, and a wonderful smile."

In fact, Biddlebaum theorizes, it's Krista's winning personality, not her looks or bedroom acrobatics, that allows her to command such a sky-high fee.

OFFICIAL — EATIN' FISH MAKES YOU STOOPID!

By TONY KURTZ

IF YOU think fish is brain food you must eat a lot of it — because a new study proves that fish, though tasty, makes you stupid!

"If you feel like you've got IQ to burn, sure, go ahead — eat fish," says Dr. Richard Smith, author of the eye-opening new book, Eating for Intelligence (Food & Nutrition Press).

"But if you don't have smarts to spare, fish is the [redacted] thing you want to put on the table. In fact, it's 'reverse brain food.' It really will make you dumb."

Smith's searing indictment of fish has infuriated seafood restaurants and the fishing industry, both [redacted] which [redacted] that "fish feeds the brain with a unique array of nutritional components."

The doctor counters by thumping a soon-to-be-published federal report that says both freshwater and ocean fish are filled with brain-busting environmental toxins.

So what can seafood lovers do to get their "fish fix?"

"I suggest they eat things that just smell like fish," says Smith, pointing to his wife. "She loves those artificially flavored 'sea legs' things you can buy in the supermarket or pick up on the free buffet table during happy hour.

"They aren't half bad if you pour a lot of ketchup on them."

SUPERMARKET LOBSTERS ESCAPE TANK & TERRORIZE SHOPPERS

By NICK JEFFREYS

LOBSTERS terrorized shoppers in a Nebraska Food Rite supermarket after their tank shattered and they escaped.

Customers fled up and down the colorful labyrinth of food aisles, frantically dodging dozens of evil crustaceans [illegible] aggressively brandishing their snapping claws.

"They were greenish blue, devils, slimy and wet," says Reva Shubert, 53, who was in the produce department when the horror began. "Their little feet made eerie 'click-clack' sounds as they scuttled around finding victims."

The worried mother of three says she quickly clambered into the tastefully arranged fruit display and covered herself [illegible] cantaloupes.

"I hid myself well," says Shubert, "but I could see through a gap in the [illegible]. I'll never forget the spraying blood and the screams of those poor people. [illegible] and nightmares."

Shubert saw a man sprinting around the corner, his shopping cart on two [illegible], one of the lobsters [illegible] on his heels.

"The lobster caught him in the aisle and slashed his legs until he let go of the cart and fell to the [illegible]," says Shubert.

I don't know, I guess lobsters made noises, but it let out a high pitched screech. It must have called to the others because seconds later, several of them were running like mad [illegible]."

"They savaged him. I could see bits of flesh flying and a pool [illegible] until he stopped struggling.

When they ate their fill, they scattered to find others."

The same grisly scene was repeated [illegible] across the supermarket. The scurrying lobsters brought [illegible] and an assistant manager before the police could shoot them all to bodyjob hell.

We got a strange call from someone saying there was a lobster attack," said Lieutenant Jones of the Treasure Town Police Department. "The woman said, 'I'm standing in the produce section and I'm freezing to death.' Hurry."

When we got inside it was a war zone. Bloody bodies of shoppers slumped all over the place. Overturned carts. The cash register girls were [illegible] in place on the black conveyor belts. Customers were hiding everywhere.

"The manager [illegible] the glass tank must have had a small crack and the pressure of the water made it explode, shooting lobsters all over the supermarket. They got the lobster hands on their claws so fast I think they already had a plan in mind. Who would have thought lobsters were so angry at us for boiling them alive and eating them? I used to enjoy a good surf and turf dinner. Not any more."

Man [illegible] Toilet in [illegible] Car

By GENE SUTCLIFFE

IF YOU thought you were driving a crappy car, consider this: a man in Stinkmere, Ind., has proudly transformed his 1999 Saturn Coupe.

"The idea came to me when I was caught in [illegible] the interstate [illegible] I'd had for breakfast. I suddenly felt an overwhelming urge to go. Unfortunately, there wasn't any around."

The next day, Myron removed the stereo [illegible] Royal Flush Plumbing II he could install the toilet.

After several failed prototypes resulting in hundreds of dollars worth of damaged upholstery, Lasher finally got it right – almost.

"The septic tank is located in the trunk, and you add water to it using a hose," Lasher explains. "This can be very tricky [illegible], especially when the bowl has clogged a few times and goes overboard, which as you can imagine is no fun when you're behind the wheel.

"But generally, I'm very pleased. No more squirming to discomfort during any morning commutes. No more pulling over to use some unsanitary public rest room.

"Overall, I'd have to say the [illegible] a ticket to my

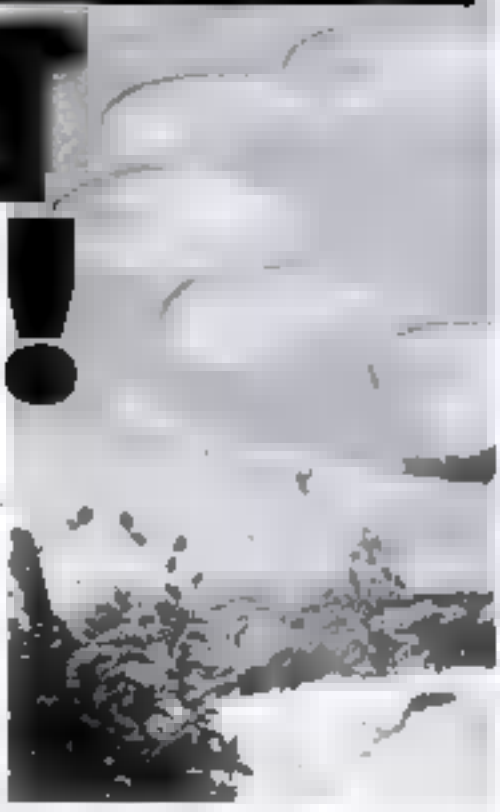
ASPHALT CIRCLES!

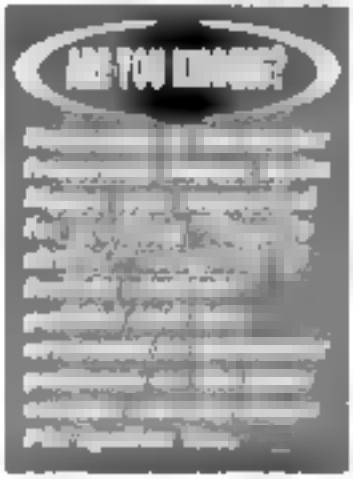


By MARK MILLER

IN an intriguing urban twist on the rural phenomenon of crop circles, city dwellers are spotting strange designs made on street pavements.

These "asphalt circles," as they are being called, have suddenly appeared, seemingly out of nowhere, in six different states throughout America -- New York, California, Illinois, Texas, Florida, Michigan and Washington, D.C.

In Chicago, security guard Chester Humphries, 38, was just arriving at work at 6:00 a.m. at the Midlands Mall, when something in the center of the empty parking lot caught his eye. "It was like some really strong wind had carved out these enormous circles in the parking lot. At first, I thought I was hallucinating because I had had a couple of six-packs the night before and always fire up a little doobie before I get out of the car for work in the morning. But I went and touched it with my own hands and those suckers are for real."



Experts were called in to investigate.

"These seem to be similar to the well-documented 'crop circles' we have seen in farm country," states Barry Ferngreave, research chief of the Texas Institute for Unexplained Phenomena, located outside Dallas.

Initially, the crop circle phenomenon was attributed to freak wind vortices, although why these created such perfect shapes in crop fields remains unexplained.

"Now we've got these asphalt circles, and we're getting ten to twenty reports of sightings every day," adds Ferngreave.

Some investigators say the asphalt circles are a natural phenomenon, others say they're communication from other dimensions or even from God. The military has become involved in their investigation and Hollywood has expressed interest in featuring the asphalt circles in upcoming movies, such as Shrek 3 and Spiderman 3.

But skeptics suggest the markings are nothing more than large potholes -- or stunts pulled by wealthy teenagers. "They're not painted or carved, that much we know," says Ferngreave. "Whatever man-made machinery in existence that could make those kinds of markings would create an awful lot of noise. These things, though, appear silently; no one has ever heard a peep out of them being made."

Darryl Petrovsky, 61, of Tampa, Fla., was leaving his friend's retirement party late one night. "I stepped outside to get to my car and saw that the entire street had been carved into complex geometric designs.

"I think it's obvious that someone or something is trying to contact us."

TERRORISTS USE INFOMERCIALS TO RECRUIT SUICIDE BOMBERS

TIGHT-BUTTED PREACHER TURNS WINE INTO WATER

A FUNDAMENTALIST preacher who believes that drinking alcohol is a sin is turning all the wine on his town into water — and the town's liquor store and bar owners are up in arms!

Lamont Crapshaft, who preaches to a congregation in Dry Creek, Ala., has been preaching against the evil of alcohol for forty years. "Ever since I drank at a wake and water up the next morning next to a man I didn't know," he says.

But the preacher was largely ignored by the community of 7,000, until he discovered his amazing power.

"I felt that I was given this power for a reason, and it was my duty to rid the town of liquor."

Crapshaft began walking into taverns and sidling up the bar. "I'd ask a patron 'What're you drinking?' and he'd say, 'Wine' and I'd point to it and say, 'Are you sure?' and he looked and it had turned into water. I convert a lot of people that way."

But bartenders and liquor store owners aren't pleased. "This freak is hanging up quit to dry," says Hobart Jones, owner of the Stagger Inn. "Not only is he making my inventory worthless, but he's scaring the patrons."

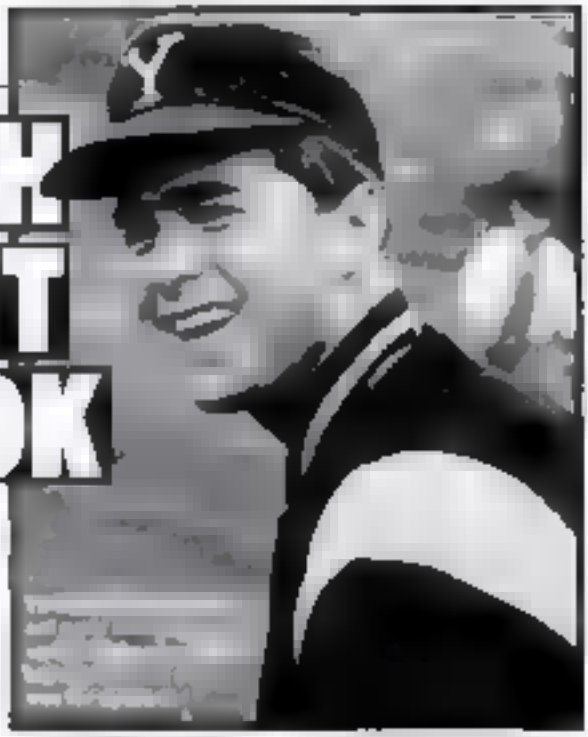
BACK-TO-SCHOOL SPECIAL

BREEZE THROUGH SCHOOL WITHOUT CRACKING A BOOK



Just like President Bush

By TRICIA METTS

YOU CAN breeze through college without cracking a book just like President George Bush did with tips from an old friend who helped him do it.

"Dubya was a pretty normal student," said Bush's former classmate.

"He ignored all early assigned homework, reading and paying attention in class was for suckers.

"He also figured out that all he expected to have any kind of future at all, he had to make passing grades.

"So he developed a strategy to beat the system, and as we can see today, it worked.

Here from Carter's new book, What Life Should Be, the educational George W. Bush style four no-sweat strategies that came to be known as "Like the President's Plan."

NO-STUDY TIP 1. Surround yourself with a cabinet of smart advisers who do your studying, thinking and homework for you.

A lot of supposedly intelligent people have written self-help books about how to do anything to be part of a group, said author as "The George Bush System."

Be forewarned: If you use the President's tips to become unemployed and legal assistance bails to flatter you, you're on your own. You're fooled around with a professor. Obviously on what to expect. Like Dubya, Bush won't have anything to worry about.

NO-STUDY TIP 2. Answer questions that always you with any old thing that pops into your head. Just be sure to ramble on long enough so that your professor forgets what it was he was asking you about or the bell rings to end class.

NO-STUDY TIP 3. Never, ever acknowledge making an error — even when it is your name, handwriting on a test paper or some other class matter gets you on tape.

Says Bush: "Just deny that it's your paper until the professor gives up and lets you take the test over at home, which is a smart tactical maneuver for you."

NO-STUDY TIP 4. If backed into a corner, appeal to a higher power or even go through a full-blown bout against cancer and "recuperation." Piece of cake.

"While it's true that praying won't always get you a passing grade in a course you neglected, miracles DO happen," Carter insists.

MY DOG ATE MY HOMEWORK — AND NOW HE'S A GENIUS!

By KATE VASQUEZ

ASTOUNDED animal experts say a 5-year-old Great Dane has turned into a certifiable genius since chewing and swallowing his master's academic research papers.

"Sparky doesn't just fetch the morning newspaper anymore – he opens it up and reads it," says Bryson Denver, 27, who's working on a Ph.D. in linguistics.

Denver says his pet's brain-genius started warning all the alarms the morning after he discovered the dog had destroyed Denver's doctoral dissertation. "I found bits and scraps of it on the floor one morning – but it looked like he'd actually eaten most of it," Denver recalls. "Next thing I knew, he turned the TV to C-Span and settled in on the couch to watch a Congressional hearing on the economy.

"I tried to change the channel and he actually growled at me."

Veterinary researchers say Sparky's sudden smarts could be the result of his literally digesting his master's research. "Evidently the contents of the research paper were absorbed into the dog's bloodstream and then into his brain," says one of several scientists who have subjected the clever canine to a battery of tests.

Says Denver: "At least Sparky won't get that incessant shrill ringing when he has a scrambled 'conference' on the carpet. I know just what he's up to – and now he knows I know."

Funeral homes pimp out their hearses

By ARLEN LANE

FUNERAL home directors across the country are pimping out their hearses to cheer up grieving families.

"A long black hearse is a real downer," explains Edward Robbins who owns Plots Are Us in Cuddlert, Okla.

"They look depressing and dull, and it doesn't help that there's a rotting corpse lying around in the back. It creeps the customers out. So all of us directors got together in an internet chat room and decided we're going to make our vehicles hip. The change will pulsating smile on people's faces. I've already gone pimped and pimped out my coffin riders. I'm so sick of dealing with one Gloomy Gus after another that I couldn't wait."

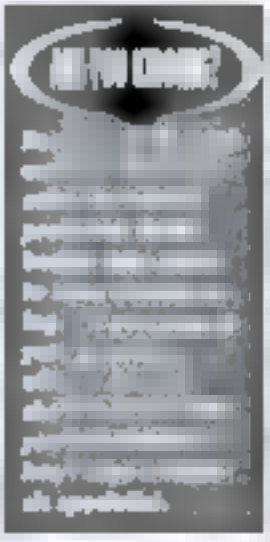
The pimped-out hearses will contain mood-enhancing features to aid passengers and mourners following in their own cars.

● SNAPPY COLORS. "No more straight black," says Robbins. "Now the cars will lit painted happy, eye-pleasing tints like orange, yellow, purple or red. We're also considering patterns like zebra stripes or even a nice [illegible]ye effect."

● SHINY HUB CAPS. "A really sharp chrome enhancement could be a conversation starter when the talk lags or gets awkward."



● FIRE-BLASTING EXHAUST PIPES. "Nothing can take your mind off your grief like a good blast of flame shooting out from behind the hearse," says Robbins. "I can also play games with this feature, like pressing the button when someone old or slow walks behind the hearse. The look on their face is comical and they jump real high."

● POLES FOR DANCERS. For families who are getting a little too dramatic with their sobbing and wailing, a few numbers around the poles, which come equipped with multi-colored strobe lighting. "I get a man and a woman stripper," he says. "That way, mourners of both genders can enjoy the performances.

"There's nothing like a good, old-fashioned lap dance to cheer you up after the sudden death of a loved one."

● MINK SEATS. Customer comfort is the goal of every good funeral director, says Robbins.

● A REALLY GOOD SOUND SYSTEM. "A booming stereo that knocks your brain around inside your head so hard you can't hear yourself think is a great way to kick the blues," says Robbins. "If the tunes are loud I don't have to talk to Mr. or Mrs. Drearypants and say all the usual crap like, 'Your father is in heaven now. Your husband is with God now.' It's such a charade — we all know I'm just spouting nonsense. I encourage passengers to start dance. Some do. I find most folks really go for the sound track to Saturday Night Fever.

Nobody but nobody can resist the Bee Gees."

POLITICIAN PROMISES NEVER TO TELL TRUTH

By JANE ANDERSON

JIMMY Carter ran for President saying, "I will never lie to you." Now a Nebraska politician is running for city council telling voters, "I will never tell you the truth."

[illegible] says Perry Kater announcing his candidacy at the local Burger King. "It's the Home of the Whopper and plenty of [illegible] exploring why he picked that spot to throw his hat in the ring.

"Today if a politician said, 'I will never lie to you,' the first thing someone would yell would be, 'There's one right there!'

"Nobody believes a politician's promises anymore," [illegible]. "But then they vote for one of them anyway and are disappointed when he doesn't do what he said. That's why so many people don't vote and why they are disillusioned with politics.

"But by promising to lie, voters see that I respect them enough not to pull the wool over their eyes."

Kater's approach seems to be working. His campaign has gotten an amazing amount of publicity for a city council race, and oddly enough, by promising to lie to [illegible], Kater has sky-high ratings for being "honest."

Ironically, Kater's speeches sound like those of a lot of other politicians.

Dear Dotti

Blind date sent me a bill for dinner

DEAR DOTTI: Last week I went on a blind date with a really nice guy and we had a wonderful time.

First, he complimented me lavishly on my chic new micro-mini skirt and see-through blouse. Then he took me to the fancy new French restaurant in town. A little later in the evening he took me to a very trendy dance club.

After driving me back to my apartment in his red Corvette convertible, he acted like he wanted to come in for a nightcap and maybe "a little something more." But I'm a virgin and have no intention of going to bed with a man until my wedding night.

Anyway, I just got home from work and opened my mail, and lo and behold there's a bill for $172.47 for dinner, $80 for the dance club's cover charge and drink tab and $400 for what Jim calls his "valuable time." Since when do blind dates get off charging for their company? Do I have to pay this? – Stunned in Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Stunned: This is what happens when find your dates in the Yellow Pages under "AAAAAAA-Male Escorts" and dress like a hooker. The bottom line? Pay the bill, prude. And the next time you go out with a guy, for God's sake – don't prance around in a see-through blouse and micro-mini unless you MEAN it!

CONFIDENTIALS

Dear Fed Up: [illegible] Listen: You should have [illegible] for injury when you let your [illegible] electric turkey baster into [illegible] next time, use the "squeeze-bulb [illegible] better yet, figure out another way to [illegible] pesky!

Dear Doing My [illegible] Determined, Cutie: I don't care how [illegible] clients you get in drag – any man who [illegible] business in adult diapers "for fun" is sick.

Do I have to eat Grandma's poisonous clam chowder?

DEAR DOTTI: I hate going to see my grandma because I have to eat her crabby food. She's real old and everything she makes is only half cooked and a lot of the time she forgets some of the ingredients, like when her pie crust gets real hard like cement and you have to chew her biscuits like bubble gum.

But the worst thing of all is her clam chowder – Dotti, it stinks. Not just a normal stink. It stinks like the clams have been in the trunk of her car for weeks. I don't want to eat Grandma's clam chowder – but Mom and Dad say "somebody" has to do it, and because I'm the puny kid, I'm elected. Help me, Dotti. Please! I'm 12. – Fed Up in Kennesaw, Ga.

Dear Fed Up: Stop your whining and call the police. Making a kid eat rotten clam chowder and bad pie is child abuse.

I know a lot of guys on the computer [illegible] at me[illegible] night and do you know, that's [illegible] I don't know [illegible] turning out [illegible] Thanks to women [illegible] for all this time, that nobody cared about me, till my [illegible] – [illegible]

WHAT'S WRONG WITH FEEDING BIRDS EX-LAX?

DEAR DOTTI: I think it's funny to put birdseed and laxative tablets on a tray in my yard and then watch the birds eat it all up and fly over my big-shot neighbor's house and do their business on his new Lexus and in his swimming pool. But my wife says the birds don't need laxatives and there are better ways to punish a neighbor. Where do you stand on this issue? – Prankster in Macon, Mo.

Dear Prankster: It would seem to me that you living next door is punishment enough for anybody. But if you insist on causing trouble, forget the birds and take those laxatives yourself – treat people over to your neighbor's house for a little [illegible]

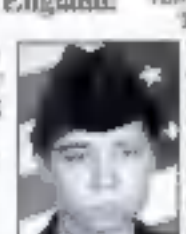
PATRIOTIC COED: I WANT TO BE THE NEXT LYNNDIE ENGLAND

By MIKE FOSTER

BUBBLY blonde superpatriot Kimberly Mastenrod is joining the U.S. military and volunteering for duty in Iraq's notorious Abu Ghraib prison — because she wants to be the next Lynndie England!

Many Americans view Pfc Lynndie, the goofish female soldier photographed walking a nude Iraqi prisoner on a leash and poking fun at another's private parts, as a disgrace to the uniform. But millions more, like Kimberly, see her as a hero who went beyond the call of duty to defend America.



Abu Ghraib prison guard Lynndie England.

"Those anti-American terrorists haven't seen humiliation yet," vows Kimberly, a 21-year-old Miami college student. "What Lynndie did was a cool start — but wait until I get my hands on them.

"They'll be so embarrassed, they'll never show their faces in public, let alone strap bombs to themselves and blow people up."

Here's a sample of what no-nonsense Kimberly has in store for Iraqi prisoners:

● Force them to prance around in women's lingerie. "I've got a bunch of my sorority sisters to chip in and I'm bringing a lot of my own stuff too," she reveals.

● Make them gobble live cockroaches and nuggets, Fear Factor-style.

● Subject them to "chocolate swirlies." This was a punishment bullies at Kimberly's high school used to inflict on helpless nerds. "Your head gets shoved in a toilet — after someone's done No. 2 in it," she explains.

● Make them dance in a Conga line — nude. "There's an updated version we call 'The Train' where everyone grinds groin-to-

● Order them to kiss her backside. "I'd make them kiss my salad, but that might violate the Geneva Convention or whatever, which I totally agree with," the blonde beauty says.

Everything will be caught on videotape and mailed to the men's families.

"Those guys won't dare to set foot in their hometowns after I'm done with them," Kimberly says.

The spunky coed agrees with many conservative commentators, including fatso Rush Limbaugh, who say the so-called "abuse" at Abu Ghraib was no worse than a sorority initiation rite. And Kimberly admits she got many of her ideas from her own college experience.

The Pentagon has not voiced approval for Kimberly's scheme and will not even confirm that her application to join up has been received. But privately, one high-ranking Defense Department official applauded the recruit's initiative and enthusiasm.

"This girl must be majoring in psychology," he declares. "She really understands the psyche of the young Arab male and what it takes to crush their egos."

ARE YOU KIDDING?

By an overwhelming majority, 68 percent of college-age Americans favor a return to the draft if it's necessary to win the war on terror. And 61 percent agree that bringing back college deferments for those who wish to participate military service

15 PEOPLE DIE OF BOREDOM WATCHING J.LO'S DVD

By JANE ANDERSON

THE EXORCIST might be scarier, but Gigli is deadlier. So far 15 people have reportedly died of boredom watching it!

"People rent this movie knowing it's going to be terrible," says renowned movie reviewer Cary Bijou. "But they think it'll be 'funny bad,' like a goof. They're wrong. Dead wrong."

Penelope Jackson's brother, Oscar, died while watching the movie. "Within 10 minutes of putting in the DVD, Oscar was wailing, 'Oh my God, I'm so-oooo bored.' I pleaded with him to let me shut it off, but he refused. 'It's GOT to get better,' he kept saying."

But the film – in which Jennifer Lopez plays a lesbian gunslinger and Ben Affleck plays a kidnapper – only gets worse.

"I've never seen anything like it," Bijou says. "The viewer's brain activity comes to a complete, mind-deadening halt while watching this film.

"People didn't die in the movie theaters because there were other things going on, like the audience throwing things at the screen. But privately, people don't do that."

The government is demanding that the movie industry create a new warning rating just for this film – "DO" – "Deadly Dull" but so far Hollywood has refused.

For Baby Boomers ONLY!

What NOT to say when you're trying to hide your age!

By DEDE HICKS

AS BABY boomers spend more and more of their retirement savings on Botox injections and face lifts to stay forever young, it's becoming increasingly important that they not give away their true age by yammering about things only old folks would know about.

And with tips from author Jennifer Tweed, men and women in their 40s and 50s won't make the mistakes that will brand them as blue-hairs before their time.

"A good example is a fifty-something [illegible] about Allen Funt and Candid Camera from the [illegible] instead of talking about today's much hipper and edgier 'gotcha' show, Punk'd — with its hunky Generation Next host, Ashton Kutcher," says Tweed, of Los Angeles.

"But if you know the lingo, and the [illegible], then you can avoid the traps.

"That, along with a face-lift and perhaps a little liposuction to fight middle-age spread, and you can claim to be much younger than you actually are with nobody having any the wiser."

Here are some do's and don'ts you should follow if you're trying to hide your age. Tweed says you can identify any other faux pas that need fixing if you record yourself in conversation, make a note of all the outdated points of reference you commonly use, and then go to work updating them.

ARE YOU KIDDING?

Baby boomers spent almost as much on wrinkle creams last year as they did on household medications — $9.1 billion compared to $9.2 billion, the National Institutes of Health report.

1. Don't mention having seen The Beatles or Elvis Presley on The Ed Sullivan Show, which proves you were alive in the 1950s and '60s.

Do mention the 1994 death of grunge king Kurt Cobain in hushed tones, suggesting that you're young enough to give a damn.

2. Don't say you remember where you were and what you were doing when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1963.

Do say "JFK who?" if someone brings it up, or at least break it to him with a disinterested comment like, "I remember learning something about that in a history class."

3. Don't reminisce about the first time you saw color TV.

Do say things like, "I wonder why all those old movies on cable are in black and white?"

4. Don't tell anyone that "Hoss" was your favorite member of the Cartwright clan on the smash 1960s TV western, Bonanza, or ask, "Whatever happened to Hop Sing?" — the Cartwrights' Chinese cook.

Do say, "Those old reruns of The Brady Bunch on DVD are so cheesy — can you believe our parents used to watch that stuff?"

5. Don't say Captain Kangaroo and Howdy Doody were the best children's TV shows ever.

Do say you learned a lot from Sesame Street — and would have watched Mister Rogers' Neighborhood if your homophobic father would have let you.

TERRORISTS USE FLEAS TO THWART BOMB SNIFFING DOGS

SNEAKY terrorists are infecting trained police dogs with Al Qaeda fleas so the canines will be distracted from their duties, allowing villains to smuggle new horrors into America, says a U.S. Customs Agency insider.

"The dogs are so intelligent and are put through such rigorous training that they're able to sniff out biological weapons, drugs, guns and bombs even if they're so carefully hidden X-ray machines can't detect them," says the insider.

"Now they can sense a threatening substance or object even through steel or lead-plated containers.

"Of course, the terrorists know this because many of their filthy plots have already been foiled," adds the insider.

The devilish scheme was simple: Visit key American airports and drop tiny insects into one pooch's fur — then let nature take its course.

"The fleas jumped from dog to "The poor pups were miserable, scratching and rolling around, trying to relieve their agony. They could barely stand up straight, much less pay attention to their duties."

Customs employees scrambled to apply powders and sprays and to bathe the dogs to stop their suffering.

"In the time it took to remedy the situation," says the insider, "who knows what kinds
